

8. Assessment of Factors Limiting Population Production and Fishery Performance

8.1. Main Limiting Factors

The main factors identified as limiting population production and fishery performance are derived from a number of different pressures from resource users. Other factors that may exacerbate these factors such as climate change and bio security issues are less well defined. Limiting factors and the associated consequences for population production are described;

8.1.1. Water resources

The limiting factors associated with use of water resources are derived from a number of sources including hydroelectric generation schemes, potable water supplies, aquaculture and the fisheries sector.

Limiting Factor	Pressure	Impacts
Morphological alterations	Dams, weirs & other structures	Accessibility of habitats Change of habitat types Reduced transport of substrates
	Channel straightening	Reduced area of habitat Reduced morphological diversity Reduced recruitment of substrates Increased peak flow & mobilisation of bed substrates
	Substrate removal	Reduced quality of substrate matrix Reduced availability of substrates Reduced transport of substrates
Flow Regulation	Variability of flow	Accessibility of habitats Decrease habitat availability Storage of fine substrates Reduced quality of substrate matrix Reduced recruitment of substrates Reduced transport of substrates
Abstraction	Water quantity	Accessibility of habitats Decrease habitat availability Storage of fine substrates Reduced quality of substrate matrix
Aquaculture	Fish farm escapes	Loss of genetic fitness Reduced productivity
	Disease & parasite transfer	Reduced productivity
	Stocking of cultured fish
Fisheries	Over exploitation	Reduced productivity Reduced genetic variation
	Stocking of cultured fish	Loss of genetic fitness Reduced productivity

8.1.2. Land use

The limiting factors associated with use of land resources are derived from a number of sources including forestry, farming, and other developments such as wind farms.

Limiting Factor	Pressure	Impacts
Fish access	watergates	Accessibility of habitats
Morphological alterations	Channel straightening	Reduced area of habitat Reduced morphological diversity Reduced recruitment of substrates Increased peak flow & mobilisation of bed substrates
	Substrate removal	Reduced quality of substrate matrix Reduced availability of substrates Reduced transport of substrates
Riparian habitat diversity	Over-shading	Reduced productivity
	Overgrazing	Reduced productivity
	Trampling	Decrease in fish cover
	Alien species	Reduced productivity Loss of biodiversity
Diffuse source pollution	Water quality	Reduced productivity
	In-stream habitat quality	Reduced quality of substrate matrix
Point source pollution	Water quality	Reduced productivity
	In-stream habitat quality	Reduced quality of substrate matrix

8.1.3. Developments

The limiting factors associated with the developments are derived from a number of sources including the roads network, urban and industrial development and sewage treatment works.

Limiting Factor	Pressure	Impacts
Stream crossings	Culverts, & bridge aprons	Accessibility of habitats
Morphological alterations	Channel straightening	Reduced area of habitat Reduced morphological diversity Reduced recruitment of substrates Increased peak flow & mobilisation of bed substrates
Point source pollution	Water quality	Reduced productivity
	In-stream habitat quality	Reduced quality of substrate matrix

8.2. Status of impacts

The current status of impacts is described as chronic, episodic, historical and emerging for each identified pressure within the responsible resource user (sector).

Sector	Pressure	Description
Forestry	Morphological alterations Diffuse source pollution Riparian habitat diversity	Historical Chronic Chronic
Farming of animals	Diffuse source pollution Point source pollution Riparian habitat diversity	Chronic Episodic Chronic
Hydroelectric schemes	Abstraction Morphological alterations Flow regulation	Historical & Emerging
Manufacturing	Point source pollution	Historical
Water supply	Abstraction	Historical & Emerging
Sewage disposal	Point source pollution	Historical
Urban development	Point source pollution Diffuse source pollution	Historical
Fish farming	Point source pollution Interaction with cultured fish	Chronic Episodic
Argyll & Bute Council	Morphological alterations	Historical
Fisheries	Morphological alterations Interaction with cultured fish	Historical Historical & chronic

8.3. Distribution of impacts

The main limiting factors recognised by the Water Framework Directive (WFD), fisheries survey data and anecdotal or map-based information for each of the Argyll management areas are classified into different categories according to source and the information below;

Code	Category
1a	SEPA – At risk of not meeting WFD good ecological status 2015
1b	SEPA – Probably at risk of not meeting WFD good ecological status 2015
2a	SEPA
2b	SEPA
3a	AFT – Assessment from AFT survey data
3b	AFT – Assessment from other survey data
3c	AFT – Assessment from anecdotal information or map-based study
4a	Other – Planning developments & consultation (potential)
5	AFT – Assessment of pressures from local marine farming of salmon

Argyll Fisheries Trust – 8. Assessment of limiting Factors

The distribution of factors limiting population production and fishery performance is described for each of the management units in Argyll;

Unit Aa – Loch Linnhe & Loch Creran
